

Dear all,

If Hun Sen signed a supplementary treaty to the 1985 treaty and to the 2005 addendum, on October 5th 2019, then this explains why the Vietnamese put up those tents inside Cambodian territories, and why those tents are now turned into more permanent structures: these might be the new delineation of the border that Hun Sen and his cronies agreed to.

Speaking at the ceremony to hand over the maps to 35 Cambodian ministries and state institutions at the Peace Palace, Phnom Penh on August 27, Var Kimhong considered the border topographic maps scaled at 1:25,000 as a "historic achievement" for Cambodia.

"We plan to send the topographic maps to be kept at the United Nations," he was quoted by Khmer Times as saying, adding that the Cambodian government will negotiate with Vietnam to demarcate the remaining 16 percent of the border.

The map represented 84 percent of border demarcation work completed between the two nations which have been implemented since 2006.

Kimhong said the maps were made based on the original maps of 1:100,000 scale produced during the French colonial era.
